A $10,000 MAUSOLEUM.

Structure to be Erected at Crown Hill for E. F. Claypool.

M. A. Downing, as president of the N. C. Hinsdale's Sons Granite Company, has the contract for the erection of a ten-thousand-dollar mausoleum in the Crown Hill Cemetery for E. F. Claypool. It will be built upon the Claypool lot just south of the chapel, midway between the Hendricks and Downing monuments, on the south side of the main drive, facing northeast. The plans have been about completed, and work will be begun upon it during the summer or early fall. Being the first mausoleum to be erected in the cemetery the work on it will attract considerable attention. It will be constructed of Barre granite from Barre, Vt.

It will be quadrangular in form, with a wing on either side and a double window in the rear to afford light to the interior. The style of architecture is modern and original. The structure will set upon a level plat, and the entrance is to be even with the ground. At either side of the door is to stand a Byzantine column, which gives the whole a sort of massive appearance. Over the door will be a large cross. At the apex of the roof, above the door, is to be a granite statue showing a woman in a sitting posture wrapt in meditation. She is resting her chin upon her right hand, which is supported by resting the elbow upon the knee. Her face is slightly turned up, and her eyes and features express the transition from grief to hope in thoughts of the future. At her feet lies a wreath of immortelles, which she has just dropped from her left hand. Aside from this ornamentation the structure is to be plain, square and massive, appearing, passing through the door the inside will be of Italian marble, supported by anchorage into a brick wall, between which and the outer granite walls is a small open space left for the purpose of ventilation. The chapel is to be laid in mosaic, and is to be six feet and eight inches wide by nine feet long. On either side will be four crypts ranged one above the other. Their dimensions are seven feet four inches long, two feet four inches wide and one foot ten inches high. These are also to be constructed of Italian marble. The window in the rear is to be of beveled plate glass. The frame of the window and all the metal work about the mausoleum are to be of standard bronze. The ceiling overhead is Italian marble, ornamented with bronze pieces. The door will be supported by brick arches, and under it is a subway to be used for additional crypts in case they become necessary. In this underground space there is room for four additional crypts. The crypts in the upper room will be closed with marble tablets ornamented with bronze. This is the first work of the kind in this city.

DEAD IN THE CANAL

PATRICK O'DAY FOUND WITH HIS SKULL BADLY FRACTURED.

Probably Murdered and Thrown Off the Blackford-Street Bridge—Had Attended a Wake.

Patrick O'Day lies dead at his home, No. 140 Blackford street. His body was drawn from the canal at a quarter before 5 o'clock yesterday evening. To the police his death is a mystery, while the coroner believes that he was murdered. The dead man was found in the canal by three boys fishing from the Blackford-street bridge. The boys were attracted to a slight ripple on the placid surface of shallow water, about one hundred feet below the bridge, and investigated. They saw a body in a half-recumbent position, near the surface, and gave the alarm. A half hundred persons gathered on the bank of the canal, and in the crowd was young Martin O'Day. As the face of the dead man was lifted above the surface Martin O'Day screamed out: "That's my father," and sprang into the water. He clutched at the body and clasped it to his breast, refusing to give it up. Police Captain Quigley and Sergeant Kuntz came up and led the half-crazed young man away. The dripping form on the bank was readily recognized as that of Patrick O'Day. The body was sent to the morgue of Renihan, Hedges & Long and Coroner Beck notified. The body had the appearance of having been in the water for many hours. It was at first supposed that O'Day had fallen into the canal and had drowned, but the ideas were dispelled when the coroner came across a bruise on the back of the head, and a further examination disclosed numerous spots, and on the left side of the neck, just below the chin, a slight cut extended almost to the left ear. A search of the pockets in the dead man's clothes revealed a clay pipe and a few pipefuls of smoking tobacco loose in the pocket. There was no purse and no money, and not even a knife. The coroner laughed at the idea of suicide. The family of the dead man resented the suicide theory when informed of the death, and declared that O'Day had been murdered.

Mrs. O'Day, the wife of the dead man, last saw her husband alive on Saturday night. He left her at the market, where they had gone together directly after supper. After the purchases had been made, O'Day told his wife that he would go to Patrick Murphy's, at the corner of Blackford and Washington streets, to spend a portion of the night. Murphy's child died Saturday afternoon, and there was to be a wake. Mrs. O'Day returned to her home about 9 o'clock, but her husband failed to put in an appearance during the night. She waited until no more until his body was carried into the house by the undertaker. Her three sons, Edward, Martin and Patrick, inquired for their father Sunday morning, and Mrs. O'Day told them that he had gone to a wake at Murphy's. The father was not accustomed to staying away from home and his sons spent the day searching for him. The family of O'Day knew little or nothing about his movements after he left home Saturday night. At that time he had $10 in his pockets, and a part of this sum was spent on the market. The man Murphy whose child lay dead Saturday night saw O'Day at his house between 12 and 1 o'clock. He was leaning on the fence and was talking to William McQuirk. Murphy had his own trouble to begeth and paid no attention to O'Day or his conversation. Murphy owns a saloon on West Washington street near his home, and he stated that O'Day came into the place about 3:30 o'clock. He had no money, according to Murphy's statement. O'Day remained a half hour and then started to the wake. Murphy closed the saloon at 11 o'clock and went home. There he found O'Day. Murphy was in his saloon last night and was discussing O'Day's death with some rough-looking loungers. A reporter walked in and leaned on the counter, and began speaking with Murphy. The proprietor was asked: Mr. Murphy, do you think that Patrick O'Day was murdered? The unfortunate query aroused the wrath of the proprietor and he resented it in forcible language.

The proprietor of the saloon next door to Murphy's saw Patrick O'Day about 10 o'clock Saturday night. He came into the saloon with one of two men, whom the bartender did not know. The proprietor thought that the two men were there to drink freely. The Blackford-street bridge, where O'Day met his death, is but a half a square away from his home. He was undoubtedly on his way home when he either fell into the canal or was murdered and thrown in. The Taylor, who is the coroner last night revealed two fractures of the skull, which could hardly have been caused by a fall. The other wounds on the face and neck strengthen the theory of murder. Chief detective Spahn worked on the case for a time last night, but he failed to get names of the men with whom O'Day was last seen, but would not disclose them. At the home of O'Day, the police were unable to talk about the death, and his daughters, Mamie and Winnie O'Day, were both protected. The entire family indignantly refused to accept the suicide theory, and the fact that the father was a pious and devout Catholic goes far to strengthen the belief that he took his own life. Edward O'Day, the youngest son, is employed by the Dan-Burk Hat Company. Patrick O'Day was about sixty years old, and an industrious man. For many years he has been employed in Kline's packing and meat market, where he worked on Saturday. The family do not believe that he had an enemy.

BOARD OF TRADE ELECTION.

George W. Sloan Elected President—
The Other Officers.

The annual election of the Board of Trade was held at the rooms of the board yesterday, and was attended by a large number of members, a larger number of votes being polled than at any election for the previous three or four years. From the opening of the polls, at 9 a. m., until the closing at 6 p. m., the voting was quite spirited. The principal contest for office was between the candidates for the vice presidency, Messrs. I. S. Gordon and Dr. A. R. White. Mr. Gordon being elected by a small majority. Dr. White gave him the most spirited contest, and the official count to settle it, as they were in true rivalry. The several candidates for the regular and independent tickets also took a lively interest in the friendly contest. The following is the result of the election:

President—George W. Sloan.
Vice President—I. S. Gordon.
Treasurer—John Osterman.
For Members of the Governing Committee—James R. Ryan, John J. Appel, Alvin J. Gardner, L. H. Blanton, John S. Lazarus, Fred L. Mayer, M. A. Woolen, J. A. Wildman.
Red lemonade, cigars and strawberries form a hard combination to beat, and that's what the successful candidates evidently worked. In any event this combination was on tap at the board's hall yesterday. Everything was good natured about the election, even Secretary Smith smiling once or twice. Nearly two hundred votes were polled.

Anniversary of the Flag.

Governor Matthews, Mayor Denny, J. N. Walker, Wallace Foster and others will make addresses.

Hon. Charles L. Henry Speaks.

Hon. Charles L. Henry, candidate for Congress, addressed the members of the Banner Lincoln League at their rooms on North West street, last night. The room was well filled and the audience was enthusiastic. Mr. Henry discussed all the national issues and presented the controversy of the two parties in a practical and forcible manner. He made a forcible arraignment of the Democratic party and its President. In the course of his speech he referred to the Hawaiian fiasco, and added that it would not be long before the Republican administration had come in till there would be treaty with that country. He gave the tariff and the money question due consideration and was frequently interrupted by applause.

John H. McMaster, Vinson Carter and J. W. Foster also spoke.

THESE RARE JUNE DAYS.

Prospects for a Siege of Hot Weather—
One Prostration.

The barber shops had an unusually busy day yesterday, the extremely hot weather causing many a man to part with his long locks. At noon the thermometer (official) registered 93 degrees and went up a few notches in the afternoon. The prospects for a considerable spell of hot weather are excellent. The exodus of women and children to the parks was large.

IN A LYNCHING MOOD

WEST INDIANAPOLIS STIRRED UP
BY EXCITING EVENTS.

Crowd Attempts to Take George
Moore from Marshal Perry's—
Chase After a Negro.

Some folks at West Indianapolis appear to have been in a lynching mood yesterday. A negro and a white man, it seems, narrowly escaped a hasty and violent exit from life, so thoroughly incensed were the people.

Yesterday morning an unknown negro made himself particularly obnoxious about town by the manner in which he accosted a number of women. The negro, who was to be begging food, and received victuals at a number of houses. Finally he grew bold, and it was rumored around that he had grossly insulted several housewives. A party of citizens set out to investigate the actions of the fellow, but he ran and the posse started in pursuit. The negro was seen by a woman on the corner of the railroad, and ran for a half mile on the track. The crowd had grown in numbers and had also increased in frenzy, when the negro boarded a passing freight and escaped.

Late yesterday afternoon Earnest Davis, a ten-year-old lad living at No. 24 River avenue, was fishing near the Vincennes bridge over Eagle creek. He boy was with a companion, who attempted to dissuade him from going away with a man named George Moore, who came along. Moore and the lad went down the creek a short distance, and the boy saw later the companion whom young Davis had left behind the boy screamed. He ran to the assistance and found him struggling with Moore. The boy cried out that Moore had assaulted him, and he was unable to escape until Marshal Thomas Perry, of West Indianapolis, attracted by the cries, hurried to the scene. The crowd, which drew a crowd of people to the spot and an effort was made to get Moore from the man's custody.
